

Aleris Dunn

Aleris Dunn is a Chief Building Official for 4Leaf, Inc. a multi-disciplined firm and one of the Nation's leading providers of construction management and public agency professional support services. Acquired over the past 20 years, exceling in many roles and levels of local government, Aleris brings a wealth of expert knowledge in the field of building administration. Currently acting as the Chief Building Official for the City of Rohnert Park and most recently serving as a Building Permit Technician with the City of Fairfield, Aleris started her career as a Student Worker with the City of Dixon. Aleris' passion and desire to learn has availed her the opportunity to provide leadership in her current role with 4Leaf, Inc.

Well respected and recognized within the local government and development communities for her ability to assist city departments and private developers successfully and efficiently navigate the permitting process. Her forward and creative thinking and commitment to excellence has elevated jurisdictions in many ways – including enhanced customer service, interdepartmental functions, problem solving, process mapping, software improvements and software implementation, leading to creation of best practices and most efficient and effective processes. During her career, Aleris has been involved with several large scale and unique projects such as peaker plants, first-time mixed-use developments, wind farms, expansion of government campuses and several more.

Aleris is a firm believer in the perpetual education and growth within our industry. As the Education Chair for the Napa-Solano ICC Chapter she volunteers her time and assists in making continued education available to all.
